

Double planes of general type with $p_g = 0$

Alberto Calabri

We will show how to construct new surfaces of general type with vanishing geometric genus from double planes, by computing explicit equations of their branch curves. Our examples fall in two categories: (1) examples of double planes, whose configuration of singularities of the branch curve was known but the existence was previously unknown; (2) completely new examples of double planes.